Is Wi-Fi making kids sick?

Parents' group offered to pay for wired connections at Ontario schools ◐ School board rejected offer, group says ◐ Board hasn't yet been reached for comment

A group of central Ontario parents is demanding their children's schools turn off wireless Internet before they head back to school next month, fearing the technology is making the kids sick.

Some parents in the Barrie area say their children are showing a host of symptoms ranging from headaches and dizziness to nausea and even racing heart rates.

They believe the Wi-Fi setup in their kids' elementary schools may be the problem.

The parents complain they can't get the Simcoe County school board or anyone else to take their concerns seriously, even though the children's symptoms all disappear on weekends when they aren't in school.

"Parents are getting together and realizing this is the pattern," said Rodney Palmer of the Simcoe County Safe School Committee. "We went to the school board and they did nothing."

The symptoms, which also include memory loss, trouble concentrating, skin rashes, hyperactivity, night sweats and insomnia, have been reported in 14 Ontario schools in Barrie, Bradford, Collingwood, Orillia and Wasaga Beach since the board decided to go wireless, said Palmer.

"We don't know yet (if Wi-Fi is the cause), but I've pretty much eliminated every other possible source." THE CANADIAN PRESS

The experts say

- Susan Clarke, a former research consultant to the Harvard School of Public Health, said that Wi-Fi technology alters fundamental physiological functioning and can cause neurological and cardiac symptoms. "Children, especially young children, are going to absorb much more radiation than older children and adults," said Clarke.
- Professor Magda Havas of Trent University in Peterborough, who does research on the health effects of electromagnetic radiation, said she is "increasingly concerned" about Wi-Fi and cellphone use at schools.

Seeking shelter for flood victims

Asma Mahmood can't understand why there hasn't been more urgent support for the victims of the Pakistan floods.

So the Mississauga resident decided to organize "Tents from Toronto," a drive to collect 1,000 tents from GTA residents to help provide shelter for the estimated 20 million people left homeless in her native country.

"For me, I thought it was the easiest thing to do. Shelter is an immediate need, and this is something we can dig out of the house," says Mahmood, who has been coordinating with the consulate general of Pakistan and with Pakistan International Airlines to ship the tents for free.

Much of Mahmood's organizing has been through Facebook, which has listed locations to drop off the tents, as well as links to places where cheap tents can be bought.

Appeal for aid

- United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon said yesterday in a visit to the country that the flooding in Pakistan was the worst disaster he had ever seen, and urged foreign donors to speed up assistance.
- The UN has appealed for $460 million in emergency aid for the country, but only 20 per cent has been given.

Poverty activists urge fixes to system

Panel of poverty experts releasing previously-confidential report today to turn up heat on province

Christine Watts was shocked in June when a truck pulled into her yard and threatened to disconnect her hydro.

The 51-year-old Cobourg-area woman, who lives on provincial disability support and a part-time job at a library, had no idea she owed $1,100 from an equal-billing underpayment for the past year.

Community agencies and family helped Watts cover all but $240 of the outstanding bill. But she was still short. So her employer agreed to loan her the money and deduct $80 from her monthly earnings of just under $300 for the next three months.

But under Ontario's complicated welfare rules, Watts's loan is considered income, and every dollar earned by someone on welfare triggers a 50-cent cut in provincial support. It means Watts will lose $120 from her $826 September benefit cheque.

"How am I supposed to get to work? What will I eat? Why does the system make it so hard?"
CHRISTINE WATTS

The government's treatment of loans to people on welfare is among 13 short-term changes a government-appointed panel of poverty experts recommended for quick action in a confidential report last February.

Social Services Minister Madeleine Meilleur made four of the changes in March. But people like Watts are still waiting for action on the remaining nine. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Onions test positive for salmonella

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency says green onions sold at five Highland Farms supermarkets in the GTA have tested positive for salmonella.

While the onions haven't been definitively pegged as the source of a string of cases in the area, the unmarked bunches are being looked at by federal and provincial investigators. The inspection agency is now trying to determine where the onions were produced and shipped, says Linda LeBlanc, a food safety recall specialist with the federal group.

The onions were sold at the following Highland Farms stores between July 30 and Aug. 1, according to the Canadian Food Inspection Agency:

News in brief

Two dead in shootings

SUSPECTS. Police are hunting for suspects after a pair of overnight shootings left two men dead in Toronto.

A 20-year-old man was found dead in an apartment building stairwell in the city's west end, just before 9:30 p.m. Saturday night.

Police have identified the victim as Byron Jones of Toronto.

Around midnight, police were called to another shooting, in the northeast part of the downtown core.

They found a 29-year-old man with bullet wounds. He died later in hospital. The victim was not identified.

Police say they have suspects in both shootings, but have yet to release any information about them.

Sprawl to sustainability? Mississauga and bikes

It could go a long way to reforming the reputation of a city that is widely viewed as a celebration of sprawl.

A new blueprint for biking in Mississauga would triple the amount of trails and road devoted to cycling from 350 kilometres to 900 and increase the number of workday bike trips from three per cent to 10 per cent. It would put 95 per cent of residents within one kilometre of a major cycling route.

Mississauga's Master Plan, called Shifting Gears, was approved in principle by council last spring. But the implementation plan mapping how and when the work gets done won't go to a vote until September.

While questions remain about whether the recommended 20-year implementation period is too slow and what the cost will be, politicians and cycling advocates say the plan proves how far Mississauga has come in embracing a more sustainable culture.

"Any community that puts cycling infrastructure in is a desirable community and housing prices reflect that," said Jeff Wachman, chair of the Mississauga Cycling Committee.

Times change

- Four years ago, armed with 400 signatures and a pile of emails, Jeff Wachman, chair of the Mississauga Cycling Committee, went to the city asking for a metre-wide bike path in both directions on nine major city routes. The suggestion was dismissed.
- The city simply didn't see cycling as a valid mode of transportation, says city Coun. Patricia Mullin, who also sits on the cycling committee. "With good law, I truly believe there will be more people that will cycle to work," she said.
- "If Mississauga makes this move it will be the first major suburb to make a commitment to cycling in the country, and I think it will retain residents," Wachman said.

Ontario moves to allow MMA

The provincial government had a change of heart Saturday, announcing it will allow mixed martial arts starting in 2011.

Premier Dalton McGuinty had always dismissed the idea of allowing the cage matches that characterize MMA, saying it just wasn't a priority for Ontario families.

He was unavailable for comment, but Consumer Services Minister Sophia Aggelonitis said regulating MMA was the best way to keep the fighters safe.

Money was also apparently a motive for the reversal. The government said one MMA event could generate up to $6 million in economic activity.

A Hamilton man is facing several charges after taking an early-morning motorcycle ride wearing nothing but a T-shirt.

Police spotted the nearly-nude 40-year-old going down a city street dotted with shops and homes at around 4 a.m. yesterday.

Police caught up with the nearly nude man a short time later. He tried to flee on foot, but was arrested close to his home after a brief struggle. Acting Staff Sgt. David Hennick said the man had been drinking, but was not impaired.

Despite his nudity, the pants-free rider was not charged with indecent exposure. The man faces several other charges.

Railway workers ratify deal

Railway workers at Toronto's busy Union Station have ratified a new three-year deal that bumps up wages and improves benefits.

Canadian Auto Workers and Toronto Terminals Railway reached the deal yesterday, after a strike was narrowly avoided last Monday.

The agreement increases workers' wages annually over three years, and includes improvements in dental and eye care. The union says the deal also improves access to retirement benefits.

In July, members of CAW local 4000 voted 94 per cent in favour of a possible strike.

The union represents 125 members at TTR, who perform maintenance,track protection and cleaning duties. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charges laid in balcony tragedy

A horrifying Christmas Eve accident at an apartment building that sent five men plunging 13 storeys, killing four, has resulted in 61 charges under Ontario's Occupational Health and Safety Act.

The men were making balcony repairs Dec. 24, 2009 when the platform they were on gave way and they plummeted to the ground. Three of the men who died were from Uzbekistan, and one was from Latvia.

Metron Construction Corp., the company doing the balcony work, was charged with 30 counts under the Occupational Health and Safety Act. A director of Metron Construction faces an additional 16 charges, and a supervisor faces eight charges.

Swing N Scaff Inc., the company that supplied the platform, faces four charges. A director for the company faces an additional three charges. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Safety failures

The Ministry of Labour laid charges related to an alleged failure to provide safe equipment, adequate training and supervision, according to a spokesman.

- No lanyard. After an investigation, police said all of the men were wearing harnesses but three of them were not using a lanyard to attach the harness to a solid structure.
- Not attached. One of the men did have a lanyard attached to his harness, but it was not connected to anything.

Canadian cities turn into tree-huggers

From more green space to traffic calming and longer bike lanes, cities across Canada are embracing the idea of environmental sustainability

ANDREW WALLACE/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ A view of the green space at Telus House Toronto, a $250-million green landmark on the once-abandoned railway lands.

Vancouver has vowed to become the greenest city in the world by 2020. New condos in Toronto are going up without any parking spaces. Regina is doing away with one-way streets to improve public transit access in a revitalized downtown.

And in Montreal's Plateau Mont-Royal borough, Mayor Luc Ferrandez is bringing a little more country into the city: "We've identified about 20 streets that are not useful, that can be taken out and retransformed into green spaces."

All over the country, cities are going green.

"I think people are waking up to the fact that while we might still be OK, our children and grandchildren might not be," said Beate Bowron, a consultant with the Canadian Institute of Planners.

Many measures probably don't seem that radical. Traffic calming is one. Narrowing streets to dissuade cars is another. More trees is yet another.

"There's a building on University Avenue, a condo development, that's being built with no parking. That's fairly radical."
BEATE BOWRON, CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PLANNERS CONSULTANT

Toronto is getting longer bike lanes and seeing a shift in some of its architecture.

"Some buildings in Toronto are being built without any parking whatsoever," Bowron said.

"I think you could say almost any city in Canada is looking to become more environmentally sustainable."

She says the push in the cities comes from wanting to deal with climate change and also to be environmentally sustainable.

While some may see the pace of change as slow, she said people have to see the necessity of measures. For instance, the creation of some so-called cool islands — pavement turned into a small oasis of green — in Toronto didn't work years ago because the neighbourhood was supposed to look after it and didn't.

"You have to bring everybody with you otherwise it's never going to be implemented properly." THE CANADIAN PRESS

PM takes flak in pro-audit emails

House of Commons audit will only include a sample of some MPs' spending ◆ Not available until fall 2011

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's inbox was deluged last May with hundreds of angry emails from citizens outraged that MPs wouldn't allow the auditor general to scrutinize their expenses.

The tsunami of electronic vitriol was sparked by the refusal of an all-party committee of the House of Commons to accede to Auditor General Sheila Fraser's request to audit the books of the lower house, including the expenses accounts of MPs.

The committee, known as the Board of Internal Economy, stonewalled for months until the public outcry was so loud that members finally crumbled on June 15, announcing that Fraser would be allowed to conduct her audit.

ANONYMOUS EMAIL TO THE PM

And among the hundreds of emails to Harper obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act, there was but one that urged the prime minister to resist Fraser's request.

The House of Commons spends about $500 million each year, of which some $130 million goes to pay MPs' telephone bills, meals, travel, hospitality and office expenses.

Recent political spending scandals that erupted in Britain, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and Labrador — some leading to criminal prosecutions of legislators — has heightened public interest in whether Canada's MPs and senators are also fiddling with their own books.

Alleged Craigslist killer dead

A former medical student accused of killing a masseuse he met through the classified advertising website Craigslist apparently killed himself inside a Boston jail, where he was awaiting trial, authorities said yesterday.

Philip Markoff's body was found yesterday morning in the Nashua Street Jail after an apparent suicide, said Ed Geary, a spokesman for the Suffolk County sheriff's office.

Markoff, 24, a former Boston University student, pleaded not guilty in the fatal shooting of Julissa Brisman, of New York City, and the armed robbery of a Las Vegas woman. Both crimes happened at Boston hotels within the span of four days in April 2009. Rhode Island prosecutors also accused him of attacking a stripper during the same week.

Markoff had met the women through advertisements for erotic services posted on Craigslist, prosecutors said.

UN urges faster aid for Pakistan flood victims

Secretary-General voices concern about unfolding disaster in country already battling Taliban militants

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said yesterday the flooding in Pakistan was the worst disaster he has ever seen, and urged foreign donors to speed up assistance to the up to 20 million people affected.

The floods began two weeks ago in the northwest and have now hit about one-quarter of the country, particularly its agricultural heartland.

While the death toll of 1,500 is relatively small, the scale of the flooding and number of people in the nation of 170 million whose lives have been disrupted is staggering.

The world body has appealed for an initial $460 million to provide relief, but only 20 per cent of that has been given. Once the floods recede, billions more will be needed for reconstruction and getting people back to work in the already-poor nation of 170 million people.

▶ Ban Ki-moon

While local charities and international agencies have helped hundreds of thousands of people with food, water, shelter and medical treatment, the scale of the disaster means millions have received little or no assistance. The UN fears that disease in overcrowded and unsanitary relief camps may cause more deaths.

Yesterday, survivors fought over food being handed out from a relief vehicle in hard-hit Sindh province and the distribution had to be abandoned. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arrest made in security breach at PM's home

Ottawa police say a man arrested after a security breach outside Prime Minister Stephen Harper's residence Saturday night remains in custody pending further investigation.

Charges, if any, have yet to be determined by the investigators. A police statement says the matter "is being addressed."

The suspect was arrested by RCMP officers around 9:15 p.m. after he was observed igniting a small quantity of a flammable liquid that he had poured onto the sidewalk outside 24 Sussex Drive. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Danger diverted

The RCMP later turned the suspect over to Ottawa police.

▶ Police say at no time was the prime minister, or members of his family, at any risk.

Google to build brand in Canada

More staff hires planned Goal to increase recognition within the Canadian business community

Canadian e-commerce is lagging and Google plans to hire more staff to strengthen its business brand in this country, says the new head of Google Canada — a Canadian who will be based in Toronto.

"The message is very clear: Invest for growth in Canada," says Chris O'Neill, who will also focus on ensuring Canadian businesses use more Google products and services, not just advertising.

Google already has 150 employees in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and Kitchener-Waterloo. New hires could be in engineering, sales, marketing and policy. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bigger & better

O'Neill will also ensure Canadian businesses use more Google products and services, and not just advertising.

- Google could provide not only advertising, but business applications like email, Google maps, the Google business channel on YouTube, co-marketing opportunities and product integration.
- In Canada, Google will be competing with Yellow Media Inc., publisher of the digital and print directory Yellow Pages.

Stock market malaise deepens

Stock markets could find themselves smack in the midst of the summer doldrums this week as the second-quarter earnings season winds down and there are few major market-moving economic reports due.

However, economic data last week gave investors plenty to think about, including more signals that gains will be hard to come by as the recovery stalls.

There has been "some very good news" in the form of a generally positive second-quarter earnings season," said Serge Pepin, director of investments at BMO Investments. "But it's being overshadowed by the gloom-and-doom attitude." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Possible abundance of Afghan oil

1959 The year oil was first discovered in Afghanistan's Amu Darya and Afghan-Tajik basins of the north.

A survey by international geologists has found that Afghanistan may have 1.8-billion barrels of oil.

The survey found the possible oilfield between the northern Balkh and Jawzjan provinces, a spokesman for the Ministry of Mines.

He said the survey would be reviewed and a statement about the possible field is expected by the end of the year or early in 2011. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDEPENDENCE ON THE LAKE

Urban Compass

CAROLYN MORRIS

Darcy Attas speeds his electric wheelchair past the rolled up sails, and red lifejackets at the Queen's Quay Disabled Sailing Program office, a blue and white portable on the dock.

In his left hand, which is bent stiffly at the wrist, Attas holds a white baseball cap with "Power Hockey Cup" emblazoned on the front. The sailing club volunteers and instructors greet him, "Darcy! What's goin' on, Darce?"

Attas tosses the cap at the program manager, Monica Sze. "It's for you," he says. He's wearing an identical one over his short brown hair, and a big grin crosses his thin face.

Born with cerebral palsy, 25-year-old Attas has sailed at the club for more than a decade. An avid wheelchair hockey player in the winter, he comes to sail three times a week in the summer. It's one of the only times he feels free. Independent. In control. Today he's agreed to take me out on the water.

He wheels down the dock, and the instructors use one of the four metal hoyer lifts to get him into the boat. The metal contraptions seem out of place on the dock. Usually used to help the disabled into bed or a bath, they don't normally symbolize fun.

"The metal contraptions seem out of place on the dock. Usually used to help the disabled into bed or a bath, they don't normally symbolize fun."

As soon as he's in, I totter onto the hatch behind him. It's a hot day, with no wind. After an instructor pushes us away from the dock, we slow down and start bobbing on the water.

"Normally I'd be flying," Attas tells me.

We're in one of the club's six specially designed Martin 16s. With all the sailing controls gathered in one spot, Attas can pull in the lines and steer manually. He started out using the "autohelm," controlling the boat with a joystick, but he's gotten stronger. (Another attachment allows you to sail by inhaling or exhaling through plastic tubes.) The seats are low, so there's no need to duck when the boom swings across, and a heavy keel prevents the boat from capsizing.

We finally get some wind. The rattle of the sails and splashing water supplants the drone of the city. I ask what it's like to sail alone.

"I can think," he says. "I reflect about how we have to take life one day at a time. We can't rush things."

The wind lets up and he pulls the main sail tighter, but we start bobbing again.

"Looks like the wind died," I remark.

"No," he answers, and signals with his head, "it's just over there."

Cat lovers respond

Letters & Tweets

We asked: What's the better pet — dogs or cats?

TORONTO. Where are all the feline lovers?

I like dogs and all animals, but must say that I prefer cats to dogs. Contrary to what most people think, cats are trainable and are very intelligent.

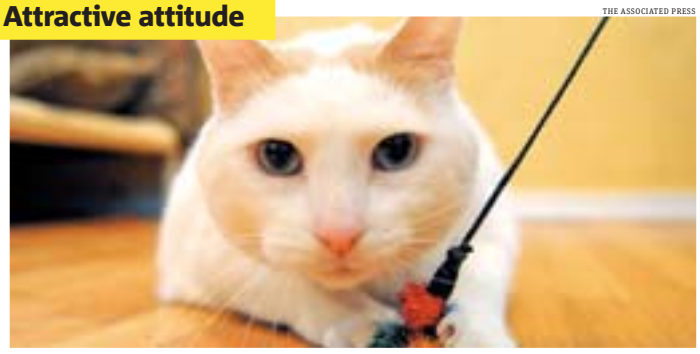
Some cats act more like dogs (such as mine), are highly affectionate and can also play fetch. They are very entertaining and, of course, the purring is so pleasing to the ear.

LIZ SIMPSON

TORONTO. I've grown up with pets — both cats and a dog and I prefer cats.

Attractive attitude

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



Yeah, they can have attitude but that's the attraction. However, each one of my cats — including my current two — have been very affectionate and eager to play. There's no work to get there — if you show them affection, you'll get it back. Rather than worry about being ignored, I sometimes complain that my cats want too much attention.

Cats are more independent than dogs, which is great. I don't have to race home after work to walk them or spend extra money for a dog walker. But when I come home, I get "kisses" and "hugs" from my cats, who are happy to see me.

Metro Minute at The Little House

Monster skyscrapers, giant SUVs, massive egos at Queen's Park ... it's enough to make any of us feel small. Thankfully, there's an app for that: Plug 128 Day Ave. into your iPhone Google Maps, and head over to Toronto's Little House: You'll feel positively huge.

The house is 312 square-feet of brick, mortar and history. Back in 1912, the land was intended as a laneway, but the city never cut away the curb to make room for cars. Instead, contractor Arthur Weeden scooped up the land, and built a house to scale.

Unlike most tourist attractions, it's always been inhabited so make sure you don't trample on the flowers. JORDANA DIVON

Lohan mom's Lauer test

NBC journalist asks Dina Lohan the tough questions Her first interview since daughter's jail stint

Matt Lauer interviews Dina Lohan on NBC's Today show.

Matt Lauer is now reportedly the highest paid person in television news, and in Friday's Today show interview with actress Lindsay Lohan's mother, he showed why NBC considers him so valuable.

In the two-part conversation with Dina Lohan, Lauer refused to be knocked off stride when he was insulted, had his facts questioned and queries deflected — emerging with a portrait his subject surely regretted later.

Lauer, who TVGuide.com estimated last week makes more than $16 million a year to host television's top-rated morning show, landed Lohan's first interview since her daughter was jailed and sent to drug rehabilitation. From the start, Dina Lohan made viewers wonder why she had agreed to be there in the first place.

"When (Lindsay) went out to Los Angeles when she was 19, I had to let her go and let her live and fall and fail and survive."
MOTHER DINA LOHAN

Lohan responded to Lauer's first question, as well as the second, third and fourth, by lashing out at the judge in the case. She said the judge played hardball with her daughter.

"You don't think she deserved time in jail?" Lauer asked. He shrugged it off when she said no and kept up her attack on the judge.

He asked her to respond, without hectoring or false friendliness, to something on the minds of viewers sitting in judgment.

"A lot of people out there, Dina, think that at some point Lindsay had this coming to her, that it was probably even a good thing to get her behind bars for a slightly longer time than it was for the first time and it would be for her own good," he said.

Lohan replied that it was "all propaganda," then threw in an insult, saying that it was something that Lauer, "in the business of entertainment," should know.

She then questioned his facts. After Lauer noted that her daughter had been in rehab four times, she interrupted to say it was really twice. Again, Lauer deflected her to stay with his central point: "Clearly, rehab the first time did not work," he said.

An hour later, Lauer returned to the point of how many rehab visits Lindsay had been made, rattling off the names of four facilities. Dina said this time it had been three.

Jean unfit to be Haiti president: Cousin

Former bandmate Michel criticizes hip-hop artist's political ambitions
Shows support for Martelly, another musician-turned-presidential-hopeful

Hip hop star-turned-politician Wyclef Jean is quickly discovering the downside of being the frontrunner in a political battle royal: the rest of the pack jumps all over you.

The pile-on in this case includes his own cousin and former bandmate.

Pras Michel told a Montreal news conference on Friday that Jean — his partner in the renowned '90s music trio the Fugees — is simply unfit to be president of Haiti.

Michel didn't mince words. He suggested Jean's ego could wind up worsening the situation in an already suffering country.

He said he "disapproved" of Jean's presidential bid.

"If Wyclef Jean wants to run around and act as though he is the messiah, then he's going to continue to perpetuate the destruction of Haiti," Michel said.

He tried tempering those comments by saying he'd still support Jean if he won — even if he won't be backing him in the presidential race.

"If for whatever reason Wyclef Jean was to continue and become the next president, we stand behind him to help in the effort to rebuild Haiti because that's what we need," Michel said.

Michel was in Montreal in support of another musician and singer vying for the Haitian presidency, Michel Martelly.

Martelly, known in Haiti by his nickname "Sweet Micky", is an extremely popular recording artist and political activist who has actually collaborated with Jean on recordings.

In charge of aid

▶ Haiti's next president will oversee the spending of nearly $10 billion in reconstruction aid promised at a March U.N. donors' conference — though less than 10 per cent has actually been delivered so far.

Jean formally entered the political fray last week, filing the paperwork in Port-au-Prince as supporters danced and cheered.

The internationally renowned singer and producer has said in interviews that Pras is entitled to his opinion, but that the two haven't spoken in nearly a decade.

At least 58 parties are registered for the Nov. 28 first-round vote to choose a successor to Rene Preval, who is barred from seeking re-election. Voters will also select legislators and local officials.

The Haitian elections are set for Nov. 28.

Keeping healthy key to success on Dance Canada

Show will not have any all-star format like U.S. version used

So You Think You Can Dance Canada debuted its third season last night, just days after the U.S. version wrapped with abundant injuries, including Edmonton native Alex Wong's torn Achilles tendon.

Dance Canada judge Jean Marc Genereux, who choreographed on the U.S. series, says he hopes contestants here will see the bruises and breaks south of the border as a cue to be extra careful.

"It's a great school to learn from and say, 'Guys, look what happened to the U.S. show, let's not do the same mistake: warm up, make sure the choreographers are aware of the difficulty that you're asking for,'" the Montreal ballroom master said.

"Everybody has to be smart and conscious about it and we're going to have an amazing season. But it's never a zero guarantee about injuries or drama or anything."

"The process of So You Think You Can Dance is so specific and so special, you think you're equipped for it and sometimes you're not." JEAN MARC GENEREUX

Lohan looking at another early exit

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Why wouldn't a drug addicted celebrity get out of rehab early? It makes perfect sense.

Prosecutor predicts Lohan won't spend 90 days in rehab ◗ Michael Lohan objects to her leaving early

After she served only a fraction of her 90-day jail sentence, it looks like Lindsay Lohan won't be in rehab for the full 90 days ordered by the court, either.

"My understanding from conversations with (Lohan's lawyer) Shawn Chapman Holley is that Miss Lohan could be released early from the treatment facility," Danette Meyers, a prosecutor in the case, tells Radar Online.

"How much earlier she could be released I'm unsure of at this point."

But her dad thinks that's an awful idea.

"My prediction is that Lindsay will get out of rehab early, probably still be on some kind of prescription drugs, she'll go right back to work and go back to hanging out with the same people and everything will once again fall apart," Michael Lohan tells the Web site.

"And this will only have been a band-aid."

Lohan checked into the rehab center on Aug. 2, after serving 13 days of a three-month sentence in Los Angeles county jail.

The judge in her case, Marsha Revel, ordered a last-minute switch to an UCLA rehab facility for what were described, at the time, as security reasons.

Cyrus looking for a C-cup?

Though she hasn't even turned 18 yet, Miley Cyrus has reportedly already decided she wants breast augmentation surgery, according to Star magazine.

"Miley is intent on getting a boob job, and she's insisting her parents sign the consent form, which is required since she's still 17 years old," a source tells the magazine. "(Parents) Billy Ray and Tish are letting her go for it. She's beyond their control, anyway."

The source says Cyrus is looking to former Playboy Playmate Holly Madison for inspiration, wanting breasts of a similar size.

A rep for Cyrus has denied the rumours of plan for a boob job.

Frasier is going to need therapy

Camille Donatacci stands to make quite a bit off her impending divorce from Kelsey Grammer — as much as $30 million US, sources tell Page Six.

"Camille stands to get half of all syndication of Frasier made during the years they were married," a source says.

"That's seven years of episodes, as well as income from other shows (Grammer's) company made, including Medium and Girlfriends."

Grammer reportedly isn't offering to provide spousal support for Donatacci.

Getting along with dad? Could your relationship play a role in later-life stress?

"We feel like something has to be sacred. If you share everything with everyone, what is there left?" Sherry Petersik, a new mom who is on Facebook, said With the social media site entering its sixth year, many early adapters are starting to have children and its causing some major privacy issues for some of them

DARRON CUMMINGS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sara Hinkle and her husband, Travis Hinkle, use laptop computers to blog from their apartment. Hinkle is a 24-year-old expecting mom and writes about her experiences. Keeping family life private at a time when 500 million people are on Facebook is a challenge for young, early adopters of the social networking site.

When Facebook users have kids

If she could turn back time, Sherry Petersik would have done things differently on Facebook.

The 28-year-old new mom, who writes a home decor blog called Young House Love, wanted only friends and family to access her profile on the six-year-old social networking site. But one blog reader sought permission, followed by others, and at the risk of alienating them, Petersik and husband John lost their privacy.

Keeping family life private at a time when 500 million people are on Facebook is a challenge made tougher for young early adopters used to living life online but now also juggling the responsibilities of marriage and children.

Petersik wanted only family to know when she was pregnant, and when daughter Clara was born in May. Their joy was tempered by concern that someone in their real-life circle would inadvertently spill the news on Facebook.

Losing privacy "has completely changed the way I use Facebook," Petersik said. "We now feel like we can't share a lot of personal things because we feel like we don't want the world at large to read them."

She said they used to share travel plans or personal details because "these were our friends and family, they're not going to rob us or have an agenda," but now the couple is hyper-aware of keeping those details offline.

Judy Aldridge, 47, and her 18-year-old daughter are heavy social-media users: Aldridge for her Atlantis Home blog and online accessories shop and Jane for her popular Sea of Shoes fashion blog.

"I think if you look at our blogs, it seems like we share a lot. But there's so much stuff that's off-limits," said Aldridge, who adds that she always looks over Jane's posts before they're published.

Sara Hinkle, a 24-year-old expectant mom and freelance illustrator said the seemingly simple act of taking pictures with friends and talking about her day now goes through self-editing.

"If they don't know about the blog, I don't ever put their names in it," she said.

But for Brittany Birnel, a 30-year-old mom of three who writes the parenting blog Tangled and True, personal blogs are so common in her social circle that she's not concerned when she shares photos of friends or their children.

Profession-centric worries

Yakini Etheridge, a 31-year-old clinical psychologist, has whittled down what she reveals on her profile as more readers of her parenting blog, Prissy Mommy, find her on Facebook. Etheridge and husband Derek have a toddler named Chase and a new baby. Etheridge didn't realize Derek, a lawyer, was sensitive about photos until she posted Derek in an undershirt and boxers, reading to Chase on the couch.

He called her from work and said, "I can't believe you put a picture of me with my underwear online!" Etheridge recalled.

She said she didn't realize that the intimate family moment was available, for example, to one of Derek's clients. She deleted the photo.

HANDOUT

▶ Nectarine garden salad with minted chili dressing.

Tantalize your taste buds with nectarine salad

Garden greens are abundant throughout the summer and into early fall. A variety makes this salad interesting both in texture and colour.

"When mixed with fresh nectarines and finished with a zesty dressing, it comes alive and tickles the senses," says chef Mark Picone of Vineland, Ont., in the Niagara Region.

Suggested wine pairing: Riesling from the Niagara Peninsula.

Chef's tip: If desired, substitute 500 g (1 lb) of pre-washed spring mix for the lettuces. You can also substitute sherry vinegar or red wine vinegar for the icewine vinegar.

Ingredients :

Dressing:
- 1 red chili, finely chopped
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) extra-virgin olive oil
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) icewine vinegar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) maple syrup
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) freshly chopped mint
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) snipped chives
- Sea salt, to taste

Salad:
- 1 Boston bibb lettuce, washed and dried
- 1 romaine lettuce, washed and dried
- 1 red leaf lettuce, washed and dried
- 3 nectarines, cut into wedges
- 1/2 red onion, thinly sliced

Preparation for dressing:

1 In a small bowl, combine ingredients and set aside.

Preparation for salad:

1 Tear lettuces into bite-sized pieces and place in a large salad bowl. Add nectarines and onion. Whisk dressing, pour over greens and toss lightly. Serve on cold salad plates.

Chicken, turkey and other poultry accounted for 17 per cent of the food-borne illness outbreaks reported to the government. Beef and leafy vegetables were close behind, at 16 per cent and 14 per cent.

The report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention covers outbreaks in 2007. Poultry was also the No. 1 source of outbreaks in 2006.

Gorgeous ginger

A staple of Chinese medicine, ginger is well known for helping digestion and relieving upset stomachs. Often referred to as a root, ginger is in the underground stem of the Zingiber plant. The fact it is rich in phytochemicals including gingerols, beta-carotene, curcumin and caffeic acid is a strong base for its therapeutic qualities. Ginger can be consumed fresh (grated), dried or crystallized (in sugar) and its poignant taste makes a delicious tea fragrance.

Great news — illegal logging has fallen 20 per cent globally, and up to 75 per cent in Brazil and Indonesia

EDWARD PARKER/TFT

▶ Logs from Forest Stewardship Council-certified company Industrielle des Bois being shipped from the Republic of Congo Brazzaville.

Illegal logging has fallen by 22 per cent globally, and up to 75 per cent in the Brazilian Amazon and Indonesia. This good news was presented in a report by UK think tank Chatham House last month.

"Up to a billion of the world's poorest people are dependent on forests, and reductions in illegal logging are helping to protect their livelihoods," said Sam Lawson, Chatham House Associate Fellow and lead author of the report.

The world's forests also play a vital part in storing carbon and as habitat for half of all terrestrial flora and fauna. Illegal logging is a serious threat not only to the forests' inhabitants but also fuels CO_2 emissions, corruption and conflict.

The study credits political pressure from NGOs and improvement in regulations and practices by the industry for the positive development. However, a lot more needs to be done.

The U.S. Lacey Act and the EU's recent decision to ban imports of illegal timber from 2012 are important steps, as is a growing interest in the industry in using sustainably managed timber. The Forest Stewardship council (FSC) promotes responsible management of the world's forests in 50 countries worldwide. And organization The Forest Trust (TFT), a member of FSC, is helping companies purchase legally harvested logs as well as supporting good forest management. For example they recently helped a Chinese factory produce the first legal plywood in China for a UK company. China is the world's top importer and exporter of illegal wood, so this was an important achievement, says TFT director Scott Poynton.

"The key place where smuggling of illegal logs come in is just before shipping."
SCOTT POYNTON, THE FOREST TRUST

A TFT-label assures the customer that the log can be traced all the way back to its stump.

"It is a challenging process, but it's not impossible," says Scott Poynton.

All logs are tagged and their species, length and diameter are documented. TFT controlled factories are visited three or four times a month to check where logs come from.

"Most of the logging is done by traders who mix logs that are legally logged with those that are illegal. The key place where smuggling of illegal logs come in is just before shipping," says Scott Poynton.

SAFER ALTERNATIVES OF INSECT REPELLENT

QUESTION:
I've heard that DEET is toxic but what insect repellent can I use on my child instead?

Stacey, Edmonton, Alberta

There are safer, less toxic alternatives to DEET and simple steps to prevent a mosquito explosion in your backyard.

Choose DEET-free insect repellent because DEET is a suspected neurotoxin and respiratory toxin. Check your local health food store for herbal repellents containing essential oils like citronella, cedar, eucalyptus, lemongrass, or peppermint which are mosquito deterrents. They are safe for use on children but not on babes under two.

Whether you're out camping or just lounging in the backyard, try these simple tips:

- Switch to unscented personal care products like soaps, lotions and shampoos since mosquitoes love fragrance. Switch to unscented laundry soap too.
- Wear light-coloured, long sleeved shirts, long pants and socks. Tuck your kid's pants into their socks for extra protection.
- Refresh any bird baths or pet dishes kept outdoors because stagnant, standing water can become a mosquito nursery overnight.
- Fill, cover or remove any items in your backyard that may collect water – empty planters, kids' toys, wheelbarrows, garbage can lids, etc.
- Keep your gutters clean to help rainwater flow freely.
- If you have low spots or areas that puddle in your yard, fill them with soil, gravel or rocks.
- Cut your grass to about three inches tall.
- Install birdhouses or feeders to attract wild birds like swallows and martins, which feast on mosquitoes.

▶ Avoid mosquitos by switching to unscented soaps.

If you must use DEET, use it sparingly. Read the label carefully, follow the instructions, and do not use concentrations greater than 30 per cent for adults and 10 per cent for kids. Lower concentrations are as effective; they just don't last as long. Never put DEET on children under six months old and never rinse DEET off into oceans, lakes or rivers.

OCEAN CONSERVANCY

▶ Animals mistake waste for food or get entangled in it. That leads to injuries and starvation when they can't feed themselves.

Trash your waste, or it may kill an animal

All rivers lead to the sea, and with it the litter thrown in it
Between 60 and 80 per cent of the waste polluting our oceans was thrown away on land

JESSICA CARLESON
METRO WORLD NEWS

Chip bags, cigarette butts, beer cans, plastic bottles. You see them on the beach and very likely they will stay there or be washed away into the ocean, onto another beach, eaten by a seal or borne by ocean currents to join the Pacific garbage patch.

Plastic makes up 90 per cent of the marine debris, and it's floating in all the world's oceans because we have failed to take care of our waste, as we should.

"Trash doesn't fall from the sky, it falls from human hands to land and to the sea," says Besteiro, head of the Ocean Conservancy's international Coastal Clean-up program (ICC).

The ICC is a global grass root movement. 7.8 million volunteers have collected 135 million pounds of garbage from beaches in 125 countries. On Sept. 25 they will mark its 25th anniversary.

Marine debris is a huge pollution problem, and tourism one of the contributing factors. If you holiday by the beach, making sure your six pack ring or chip bag ends up in a bin might actually save a seal's life.

"If you see trash — pick it up," is Sonya Besteiro's advice to tourists this summer.

There are international, regional and local efforts to stop waste even reaching the ocean. The MARPOL (International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from ships) has been signed by 122 countries. But experts agree that more work is needed. When developing countries start consuming like the west, without infrastructure for responsible waste management, the problem will only grow. Besteiro is hopeful though.

"This is a thing we can actually solve, by prevention and education. It's all about changing behaviour," she says. "Everyone has a footprint on the marine environment."

Plastic

Plastic's durability is a double-edged sword. It takes hundreds of years to decompose and thrown in nature it's just crushed into ever smaller pieces and ingested by creatures as small as plankton. Bin your plastic bottle.

Sources of marine debris

- Tourism: food and beverage packaging, cigarette butts, plastic beach toys
- Sewage water from storm drains and sewers that overflow carry street litter, including condoms and syringes, to the ocean.
- Fishing waste: lines, nets, fishing pots and strapping bands from bait boxes that are lost or dumped overboard.
- Waste from ships and boats that is accidentally or deliberately dumped.

Make Fair Trade your trade

How you can bring awareness to your community

▶ A team from Ten Thousand Villages sells Fair Trade crafts at an outdoor event.

It used to be that Fair Trade products were only available in small shops and health-food stores. However, we're starting to see Fair trade items popping up in more mainstream places. But how can you help spread the word about Fair Trade?

TransFair Canada, a national, nonprofit Fair Trade certification organization, has a wealth of information and ideas. In the past three years, they have recognized 14 Canadian towns (including Barrie) as Fair Trade Towns for their commitment to supporting the principles of Fair Trade and are looking for more cities to join the cause. They also offer free promotional materials to support vendors and Fair Trade promotional activities. And they even have a handy Fair Trade Finder that allows you to find vendors by address and by product all over Canada.

But you might already be helping the Fair Trade cause without even knowing it. Many cafés have already begun serving Fair Trade coffee and tea. Supermarkets are stocking Fair Trade items like cocoa and sugar. And even mainstream snack foods are getting in on the action (Cadbury has committed to producing their original Cadbury Dairy Milk chocolate with Fair Trade certified cocoa). To see if a product meets Fair Trade standards, just look for the "Fair Trade Certified" label.

For more information on Fair Trade in Canada, visit www.transfair.ca.

All's Fair

In developed countries, many producers for staples such as cocoa, coffee, and sugar receive subsidies and incentives to protect them in the event of fluctuating market conditions and other unforeseen circumstances that may prevent them from making a liveable wage. Not so in developing countries.

Fair Trade not only ensures that there is a minimum price set for goods that enables producers to cover their costs and take care of their families, but it also requires that hired workers' wages for producers are at least equal to the national minimum wage and that labour conditions are fair and safe. And outside of the Fair Trade minimum, a premium is placed on prices that creates a fund that allows workers and farmers to improve their community through social, economic, and medical intiatives.

Fair Trade also helps the environment, too. Agreements with producers require that water and energy conservation, fire prevention, and waste management standards are put in place and strictly adhered to. As well, many Fair Trade producers are using skills in composting and chemical reduction to transition to fully organic processes. So the more Fair Trade products are sold, the more families are provided with improved living conditions—and the more green our earth will become!

All in the Family

Working with family members is full of challenges
How to make the most while avoiding pitfalls

DREW HINSHAW
WORK@METRONEWS.CA

Most graduates, having chucked their mortarboards to the sky, venture forth from university to pursue professions long from those their parents practiced.

But with the unemployment rate hovering in the clouds, more and more graduates are falling closer to the family tree, landing a spot in that parent-run storefront as old and venerated as your great-granddaddy's daguerreotype on the mantelpiece.

"There is evidence that more young people are doing the unexpected," says Professor Ernesto Poza, who wrote the Family Business textbook. "They've gone to school precisely to open their own trail, and then they realize that doing that in this economy is not as easy as it once was. So they fall back onto a fail safe: The family business."

The problem, Poza warns, is that youngsters who fall back into a company of kin are too likely to recline — and treat the position like some cushy heirloom in an office where results don't count as much as chromosomes.

Which is why career guides encourage family biz-bound graduates to take a warm up lap in that thankless, brutal job market that lurks beyond the property line.

"Work an outside job for long enough to receive a promotion," Family Business Magazine editor Barbara Spector encourages. "You'll earn credibility with non-family employees, and come in with the feeling that you've accomplished something on your own."

You may even find your place in the company dynasty — the talents, passions, and bright ideas you bring to the tribe.

"Otherwise, the risk is never knowing what you're truly good at," Poza says.

New hires plucked from the family tree need to feel like their recruitment was merited, not inherited, Poza notes. "If you're going into the family business because of a sense of cultural or family duty, owning that decision is next to impossible," he warns. "Your best bet is going to be a heroic act in which you bring the family business back from the brink." Definitely, there's enough family businesses nearing that brink: Small businesses in every corner could use a golden child with a prenatal gift for management.

But if your fam's franchise doesn't qualify — and if your enticed by the employment, it likely doesn't — then consider enlisting one cautious contract at a time.

"Join on a project-by-project basis," suggests Poza. "Most young people come out of school with a real mind for projects."

▶ Didn't want to get mixed up in the family business, huh? As long as it's not the kind of "business" depicted in The Godfather you should be fine with a few of these pointers.

"They've gone to school precisely to open their own trail, and then they realize that doing that in this economy is not as easy as it once was. So they fall back onto a fail safe: The family business."
ERNESTO POZA ON RECENT GRADS GETTING JOBS WITH THEIR FAMILIES

Go through the motions

Be skeptical, Poza stresses, about any position where you call a relative boss. Be even leerier if you won't report to any boss at all. "Make sure there's a real job available," Spector agrees. "You would probably even want to have an interview, and go through the same process that anyone else would go through."

No short cut to success

Research suggests passion creates super achievers

CRAIG LUND
WORK@METRONEWS.CA

A few weeks ago I had the fortune to be invited to a TED recording for popular speaker and author Richard St. John.

The talk, based around his latest book, The Eight Traits Successful People Have in Common, gives the framework for how people like Oprah Winfrey, Bill Gates and Lance Armstrong achieved their own success … and I'm not going to lie, you will be disappointed to learn that there is no short cut, it's going to take a lot of work. According to St. John, if you are able to focus on the traits he discusses in his book, you can expect to achieve success "in about 10 years."

St. John's eight traits include Passion, Work, Focus, Push, Ideas, Improve, Serve and Persist. Having interviewed hundreds of successful people from a huge range of disciplines including sports, science and business, St. John discusses how passion creates super achievers and is quick to clarify that success does not always mean money. In fact the best success stories are from the people who just wanted to be successful … the money came after.

- The Eight Traits successful People Have in Common — 8 to be Great
- By Richard St. John
- Train of Thought arts, 224 pages, $17.70

It is important to also know, and St. John has experienced this first hand, that success is not permanent. Without continuously and consistently following the eight traits, your success will start to wane.

McLean pays tribute to official languages

- Radio host says legislators who crafted the Official Languages Act should be applauded for their courage
- English, French Canadians need to take next step

On the 40th anniversary of the Official Languages Act, host Stuart McLean of CBC Radio 1's Vinyl Café decided to pay public tribute to the federal legislators of 40 years ago.

Remembering the controversy surrounding the Act, and other equally contentious pieces of legislation such as the adoption of a new Canadian flag or the abolition of the death penalty, McLean told his audience: "It was the courage of those Parliaments and the politicians who were in the House at that time that gave me my great respect for the idea of public service and for those who put themselves forward for public service."

"It was something I feel," says McLean of his broadcast piece, "it should be said more often. Public service people who take a stand for something are not given enough respect. We've been so well served by our public service."

"I remember the anger in English Canada against official bilingualism in Canada," he says of the political and legislative debates of the late 1960s."

In McLean's 1992 book about small town Canada, Welcome Home, English and French Canada don't always seem to know much about each other. One example is the Quebecer who has never heard of French Immersion. I ask McLean, who travels across Canada for the Vinyl Café: Have things improved since then?

"People are resistant to change, but now few people would argue against bilingualism, the flag or medicare. These are things which Canadians embrace. These are things which define us as Canadians."
STUART MCLEAN

"I suspect that Canadians are more tolerant, more accepting of each other," he replies, "but it's time for us to go the next step." As he put it in his broadcast, "we haven't been successful with our sense of each other. We have been tolerant and ... accommodating too, but we haven't said that they are also us. We haven't embraced the most fundamental truth about us: that they are us, and we are them." It's the old Martin Buber idea, "I am thou," he tells me.

McLean grew up in the very English-speaking suburb of West Montréal.

"I learned the basics of French at school, but it's when I spent the summer working on a construction site where I was the only "Anglo" within 50 miles that, for the first time ... I understood what it meant to communicate in another language."

Looking back on that experience, he says: "I think I learned not to be shy — I could make errors, be inarticulate. I learned that I could communicate with my high school French."

As an artist who works exclusively in English, McLean realizes that his "work requires a Francophone to make the leap into English," even if the Vinyl Café has presented Francophone performers like 3 gars su'l sofa, Les Batinses, Pierre Lapointe, Ariane Moffatt, Daniel Grenier, and Amélie Lefebvre to enthusiastic audiences across the country. As a citizen, McLean feels that one should be reading Quebec literature, listening to their music and watching their films. "I listen to a fair bit of Quebec music," he says.

"The last thing I listened to was probably my all-time favourite Québécois CD from the 1970s, Harmonium's magnificent Si on avait besoin d'une cinquième saison. We should all be involved in each other's culture."

Wild ending at Whistling Straits

Martin Kaymer won the PGA Championship in a three-hole playoff yesterday that did not include Dustin Johnson, who was penalized two strokes for grounding his club in a bunker on the last hole.

Kaymer captured his first major in a PGA Championship that might be remembered as much for a guy who tied for fifth.

Johnson had a one-shot lead playing the final hole at Whistling Straits when he drove into a tiny patch of sand where the gallery had been walking all week. Johnson grounded his club, unaware he was in a bunker. He missed the seven-foot par putt to seemingly slip into a three-man playoff with Kaymer and Bubba Watson. But the two-shot penalty turned his 71 into a 73, and instead of going to a playoff for redemption from his U.S. Open meltdown, he tied for fifth and headed home.

As Johnson was leaving the course, Kaymer was coming up clutch again.

Rogers Cup goes to Murray once again

Fourth seed wins rain-marred final in straight sets ◐ First to repeat at Canadian tournament since 1995

Andy Murray politely described his stay in Toronto as "one of the best weeks I've had," when it would have been just as accurate to describe his run at the Rogers Cup as one of the best weeks anyone could have on the ATP World Tour.

The 23-year-old from Scotland beat the top-ranked player in the world on Saturday, and he followed it with a win over No. 2 yesterday, winning the tournament with a 7-5, 7-5 victory over Roger Federer at Rexall Centre. It was his first title of the year.

Murray has become the first man to repeat in Canada since Andre Agassi successfully defended his title 15 years ago. He also became only the fifth player to beat both Rafael Nadal and Federer in the same tournament.

"Winning a tournament is always great," Murray said. "This is the first time I've beat Roger and Rafa in the same tournament, which is probably the most pleasing thing. And I didn't drop a set against either of them — so it's good for the confidence for the next few weeks."

Play was delayed several times by rain at York University, where the players also had to combat the heat and oppressive humidity in the $2.43-million US event. Murray claimed $443,500 with the win, while Federer had to settle for $222,000 with the loss.

"I feel great," Murray said. "Anytime you win a tournament, you're obviously incredibly happy. There's a sense of relief, especially at the end of a match like today, where you're up, and then you get delayed and he comes back at you."

It was the first time the two men had met since Jan. 31, when Federer rolled to a straight-sets win to claim the Australian Open.

"I thought he played well," Federer said. "He wasn't giving me much and he clutch-served at the very end when he had to. He deserved the victory."

Attendance

- A week that opened with a surprising Canadian victory has ended with record attendance figures at the Rogers Cup, with more than 161,000 tennis fans filing through the gates at York University to watch the men's event.
- Tournament director Karl Hale said yesterday there have been five sellouts, which is three fewer than two years ago, but only because capacity has been increased on the grounds around Rexall Centre.

Ph his worth to Jays

In first outing since his big deal, lefty earns win with stellar performance

4	1
BLUE JAYS	ANGELS

Toronto Blue Jays general manager Alex Anthopoulos was convinced he made a shrewd investment by signing Ricky Romero to a $30.1-million US, five-year contract extension. It took the left-hander one day to return his first dividend.

Romero pitched seven solid innings yesterday in a 4-1 victory over the Los Angeles Angels. He allowed six hits, struck out four and walked three, the only run coming off Mike Napoli's fifth-inning homer.

The contract, which includes a $1.25-million signing bonus, runs from 2011-15. It covers Romero's three arbitration seasons and one year of free agency.

Romero will be paid $750,000 next season, $5 million in 2012 and $7.5 million in each of the next three years. There also is a $13.1-million club option for 2016, and a $600,000 buyout. He is the first player on the roster with a contract guaranteed through 2015.

"I feel very, very blessed. It's definitely very special getting a win here in Anaheim in front of my parents. That's just the icing on the cake."
ROMERO, WHO WAS BORN IN L.A.

And it's just his second season in the big leagues.

"Romero deserves that contract. He's thrown the ball terrific this year," losing pitcher Dan Haren said. "He's a young star, and I'm sure he'll live up to the expectations."

Plenty of pitchers in recent years have struggled after signing big deals, most noticeably Barry Zito, Carl Pavano, Kevin Brown and Mike Hampton. Romero (10-7) doesn't expect to fall into that trap, nor does he believe this contract automatically puts him in an elite category where he's expected to win 20 games every year.

"I just consider myself a major league pitcher," said Romero. "I'm not trying to put a label on myself. That's not me. It's already a blessing for me to be able to put on a big league uniform."

2 Kevin Slowey held Oakland without a hit for seven innings as the Twins defeated the Athletics 4-2.

3 The Diamondbacks-Nationals game was interrupted by protesters urging commissioner Bud Selig to move the 2011 All-Star Game from Phoenix because of Arizona's new immigration legislation.

4 Jeremy Hellickson became the first Rays pitcher to win his first three major league starts as Tampa Bay beat the Orioles 3-2.

5 Bryan Bullington, the No. 1 overall draft pick in 2002, threw eight crisp innings for his first major league win, leading the Royals to a 1-0 victory over the Yankees.

NHLer Comrie weds actress Hilary Duff

MARRIAGE. Actress Hilary Duff has tied the knot with free agent NHLer Mike Comrie, most recently of the Edmonton Oilers.

The pair, who were engaged in February, sealed the deal in an intimate, 100-person ceremony, which was held at a California mansion around sunset on Saturday, according to MTV.

Audiences met the former child star as Lizzie McGuire, the lead role in the television series of the same name, and have watched her grow up over the years.

Duff, 22, has also succeeded as a singer and businesswoman, while Comrie, 30, has cut the ice as a centreman with several NHL clubs.

Duff's older sister, Haylie, was the maid of honour, and their mother walked the bride down the aisle.

Bragging rights on the line for N.Y. teams in pre-season battle

GIANTS JETS

Bragging rights and a happy housewarming are on the line.

And, with all the trash talking going on between the Jets and Giants, it's clear both teams want to celebrate the first football game at the New Meadowlands Stadium with a victory tonight.

"You want to win every game," Giants tackle David Diehl said, "but playing the Jets adds a different dimension to it."

Even if it is only pre-season.

"It will be a big-time rivalry game, us against the Giants," Jets quarterback Mark Sanchez said. "That will be fun."

Things were ramped up a bit during the week when a few players — the Jets' Bart Scott and the Giants' Terrell Thomas — took shots at each other. The chatter mainly revolved around whether the Jets now own the town, and whose stadium it really is.

"We're opening up a stadium and there's a lot going on right now," Thomas said. "There's a lot of hype around it making it a lot bigger than it is. It's going to be a battle. between our twos and threes."

The teams traditionally meet in the third game of the pre-season, but both wanted to be part of the unveiling of their new $1.6-billion US, 82,500-seat stadium to football fans.

Miami Deco wins Breeders'

TORONTO. Miami Deco earned his first career victory with a bang yesterday.

The dark bay or brown colt overtook Stormy Lord on the inside down the stretch to capture the $500,000 Breeders' Stakes as a 65-1 longshot. That surpassed last year's winner Perfect Shower (46-1 odds) for Hall of Fame trainer Roger Attfield as the race's longest-priced winner.

Drug arrest for Heat's Haslem

MARIJUANA. Heat forward Udonis Haslem was arrested yesterday for possession of marijuana following a traffic stop in Miami-Dade County.

Haslem, 30, was stopped around 3:05 p.m. ET because of speeding, Florida Highway Patrol spokesman Sgt. Mark Wysocky said. Haslem was also charged with illegal window tint, Wysocky said.

Harvick holds on for Cup win

NASCAR. Kevin Harvick passed Denny Hamlin with 11 laps to go, then held on to win the NASCAR Sprint Cup series race at Michigan International Speedway. This was Harvick's third win of the season and his first this year on a nonrestrictor plate track.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 19 You must look on the bright side of life as the new week begins. Don't sit at home brooding about what might have been: get out there and make things happen. Attitude is all important. Make yours ultra positive.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 21 Once you make up your mind about something that's it – nothing can make you change it again. You may see that as a strength but it could also be a weakness today. Even a Taurus needs to be flexible sometimes.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You may have some explaining to do after your escapades over the weekend, but you don't have to make excuses.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You may be pleasantly surprised today that a relationship which has been going through a tough time suddenly sparks back into life. As always, a lot depends on your expectations, so expect the best and you'll probably get it.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Today's Jupiter-Saturn opposition may undermine your confidence but everything will work out for the best in the end. It always does.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You will find it quite easy to understand why people behave the way they do today, and that's just as well as they will be doing some rather strange things.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 If you do not agree with what certain people are doing you must speak up and make your thoughts known. Saturn in your sign may make you a bit moralistic but only because you care about the people you love.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Listen to what your inner voice tells you and act on it immediately, even if it means doing the opposite to everyone else.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You might be tempted to see how far you can push your luck today. Don't!

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You'll be a bit nervous today but that's okay. By this time next week you will be full of confidence again and what's a week but a mere seven days. Between now and then steer clear of people who upset your balance.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Does it seem as if everyone is conspiring against you? If so you need to stop worrying and start acting as if the whole world wants you to succeed – because it does. You're being negative for no good reason.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 You will see connections and possibilities today where other people see only confusion. As a Pisces you have a natural ability to tap into the positive energy. SALLY BROMPTON
